Five Art Projects Selected for Town Center

On June 12, the Mayor and Council unanimously approved awards for five art projects that will enhance the Rockville Town Square development, which is part of Phase I of Rockville Town Center.

All five projects also had unanimous recommendations from the Rockville's Cultural Arts Commission and the artist nomination committees appointed to analyze the more than 350 overall artist entries submitted in response to a nationwide call for proposals.

The total award for the five projects is $235,000. The entire site will have nine works of art at an overall budget of $500,000. The funding will come in the form of $247,000 from the City's Town Square project budget; $107,245 from the Art in Public Places program; and $145,755 from the Art in Public Architecture project.

The art projects will enhance the 12.5-acre development of mixed uses that will include retail, condominium residences, restaurants, cultural and office space. The new Rockville Library and a public plaza will be part of Rockville Town Square, whose first buildings are scheduled to open in late fall.

"There were probably 400 people involved in this process since we began planning for art in Town Center," John Moser, chairman of the Cultural Arts Committee told the Mayor and Council in explaining how art proposals from the finalists were determined for consideration. He stated opinions were solicited from people who viewed art proposals that were on display for more than a month at Rockville City Hall and on the City's Web site.

One of the proposed art projects (Project 1) was not addressed at this time. This artwork would adorn six open grills on a parking garage along North Washington Street. Those grills are still in the design stage.

At a June worksession, the Mayor and Council were presented with models developed by the finalists selected for each project. All finalists' proposals were rejected for three of the projects: Project 5 (a sculpture that will be incorporated into a fountain base at the corner of Beall and Maryland Avenues); Project 7 (a temporary mural that is to go on the side of a building on East Middle Lane); and Project 9 (a work that was supposed to interpret "a series of many separate elements" and be located on the future Gibbs Street). All three projects will be re-examined and new entries will be sought for submission.

In rejecting the Gibbs Street entries, the Mayor and Council further discussed the significance of William Gibbs, who worked with former Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall during the period of segregation to gain equal pay for teachers at Montgomery County schools for minorities. A $40,000 award is earmarked for the art project on Gibbs Street and the Mayor and Council suggested that the project for that location possibly be a tribute to Gibbs.

Mayor Larry Giammo and Councilmembers Bob Dorsey, Susan Hoffmann, Phyllis Marcuccio and Anne Robbins each had a wide variety of comments on the art projects. They also asked that some suggestions be relayed to the selected artists before the actual artworks are created.

All nine of the art projects are expected in place by the May 2007 formal grand opening of Rockville Town Square.

A more detailed look at the five works selected can be found below. ■

PROJECT #3 Concave Wall Niche

Location: North Washington Street and Beall Avenue

Budget: $25,000

Title: Cornerstone

Artist: William Cochran from Frederick, Md.

From the artist: This mural celebrates the people and institutions that built Rockville as a diverse community. Artifacts from various periods are displayed in a mythical, almost dream-like way. A series of historic photos and documents are clipped lightly to a stretched copper wire. A fragment from the "Great Law in Onondaga" in Native American history appears in the artwork. "Liberty" is depicted as a very young child of multiple ancestral backgrounds.

PROJECT #2 Three Architectural Niches

Location: North Washington Street Facade 2

Budget: $60,000

Title: Untitled

Artists: Ken and Judith Williams from Pueblo, Colo.

From the artists: This brick carved sculpture will represent periods in the history of Rockville. The first sculpted panel will portray the Europeans' early contact with native people. The second panel will portray the development of the new society in Rockville area. The third panel signifies the contributions of the Rockville people to science and health.

PROJECT #4 Sculpture

Location: Beall Avenue and Maryland Avenue

Budget: $30,000

Title: Clio

From the artist: This bronze sculpture, which can be seen as a tree grove of flying book forms, expresses many aspects of the spirit of Rockville, as well as a thematic connection to the new Rockville Library. The name "Clio" is derived from the Greek muse of history. The sculpture is nine and one-half feet tall and 20 feet across.

PROJECT #6 Facade Treatment

Location: Hungerford Drive Parking Garage Facade

Budget: $80,000

Title: Crossroads

Artist: Craig Kraft from Washington, D.C.

From the artist: Rockville is and has always been an important crossroads. This neon glass and aluminum sculpture will reflect off of the existing architecture, injecting the landscape both day and night with energy, evoking Rockville's pioneering spirit in the technology and scientific fields. The 16 feet high by 30 feet wide by 4 feet deep sculpture will be mounted above the crossroads in the center of Rockville.

PROJECT #8 Surface Images Within Sidewalks

Location: North Maryland Avenue

Budget: $40,000

Title: Under One Roof

Artist: Dan Snyder from Berkeley, Calif.

From the artist: This work of art is created in and with the sidewalk pavers. Selected pavers will be sand-blasted and waterjet cut with text of different sizes and font referencing "Welcome" in many different languages; "Historical Reminders" and "Memories" as well as augmentation of inlaid brass elements. The new town square literally sits on the historical intersection of the original Indian crossroads.

Outdoor Patio Performances By Rockville Concert Band July 18 and Aug. 1

The popularity of last year's Patio Performances by the Rockville Concert Band demanded a return this summer. For the summer of 2006, Patio Performances are planned for July 18 and Aug. 1 at 7 p.m. on the patio behind F. Scott Fitzgerald Theatre.

The performances will feature well-known concert band classics by composers like Holst, Vaughn-Williams, Sousa, Leroy Anderson, K. L. King, Morton Gould, Sammy Nestico, Warren Barker, classical favorites and Broadway tunes.

College-aged or older musicians are invited to sit in and perform alongside the band members at these patio performances. Contact Betty Wisda, Rockville's arts programs supervisor, at 240-314-8681 or bwisda@rockvilledm.gov. Please note your band instrument and band experience.

Lawn seating is available for the concerts. Bring a chair or blanket for comfortable seating – rain or shine. The event is free.

The F. Scott Fitzgerald Theatre is located at 603 Edmonston Drive on the grounds of Rockville Civic Center Park. ■

Sculpture on the Grounds Celebrates 20 Years

A Tribute to Skating Icon Peggy Fleming Highlights Local Artists' Creativity

It has been 28 years since Peggy Fleming won an Olympic skating gold medal. However, in almost three decades since, Fleming has become an American icon, starring in skating shows and regularly appearing on television.

One of the most popular skaters in Olympic history is being saluted in Rockville in a life-sized piece titled "Peggy," as part of the 20th annual Rockville "Sculpture on the Grounds" exhibit that opened in Rockville Civic Center Park in June.

To celebrate the 20th anniversary of this time-honored tradition of sculptures in the park, this year's exhibit will feature works by six artists, including one from Rockville.

Continuing through Sunday, Oct. 15, the grounds that are home to Glenview Mansion and the F. Scott Fitzgerald Theatre will be filled with bluestone, stainless steel, lava rock and other diverse materials created by the selected artists.

For the second straight year, the Rockville Concert Band will perform a series of free outdoor concerts throughout the summer in conjunction with the show. On the patio behind the F. Scott Fitzgerald Theatre, the Rockville Concert Band will host its "Patio Performances" on July 18 and Aug. 1. (See story on page 1 of this insert.)

Sure to attract considerable attention will be the tribute to Fleming designed and sculpted by brothers Peter and Richard Markey. The Markey brothers employed quarter-inch aluminum to create the life-size tribute to Fleming. The result is a shimmering re-creation of Fleming's free-skating program that won her the gold medal in the 1968 Winter Games.

"We thought that a tribute to Peggy Fleming would be appropriate, and we hope that the exhibit audience will appreciate it as well," said Peter Markey. "We used aluminum because we knew that it would give an aesthetically-pleasing, eye-catching shine."

Another work in the exhibit was produced by Rockville's Malcolm Hally. He employed brass and copper to form "Time Out," a towering interactive structure that allows glass marbles to run down two different tracks.

"The idea behind it is simply my fascination with moving objects in space, and 'Time Out' is an embodiment of this fascination," said Hally, who has been working with various types of kinetic sculptures for more than 10 years.

"Kaleidoscope," crafted by Michael Guadagno of Danvers, Mass., is another highlight of the exhibit. As with most of his work, Guadagno aimed to express traditional forms with strong classical roots in new and exciting methods. Kaleidoscope is a colorful metallic wonder made from aluminum and cast glass with visual elements akin to kaleidoscopes.

Other featured works include Don Herman's "Flight," Garrett Strang's "Aloft," and Glenn Zwegardt's "Passion's Guardian."

'Funny Guy' Makes Rockville Laugh for 17 Years

Get ready for some big laughs and a night filled with juggling, unicycling and lots of audience participation. "Funny Guy" Paul Hadfield is returning to Rockville for his 17th year with a hilarious and entertaining performance for the Kids, Parks, Performing Arts series.

Kids, Parks, Performing Arts is a free outdoor family entertainment series held on Tuesday nights at various neighborhood parks in the Rockville area. Hadfield will present his "Funny Guy" performance at King Farm Park on Tuesday, Aug. 1 at 7:30 p.m.

Performing for 20 years, Hadfield said Rockville was one of his very first gigs.

"Hadfield has performed for the City of Rockville almost annually for at least 17 years. He has been featured in the Kids Parks, Performing Arts series and many Hometown Holidays," said Kathleen Moran, Rockville's Civic Center Park superintendent. "He has become a Rockville 'tradition' to many generations of kids."

Hadfield began his career touring the country at age 23 as a wire walker with the Royal Lichtenstein Circus, which he describes as a "trial-by-fire performance experience." He left the circus having fallen in love with performing and with the hope of one day putting together his own show.

Hadfield's solo career started small, performing on weekends in places such as the Baltimore Inner Harbor. By 1986, he was performing full time.

Over the years, Hadfield has developed four different characters and acts: General Foolishness, Spats – the Lost Vaudevillian, The Funny Guy and Hadfield & McCoy. He will be performing his Funny Guy act, complete with improvisation and verbal humor, for his August performance in Rockville.

Hadfield describes his performances as unique.

"There's a lot of humor in my acts for the adults and, if the kids don't get it, that is fine because there is lots of other absurd, broad physical stuff going on for kids that they find funny," Hadfield said. "My goal always has been to bridge the gap by having kids laughing along with adults."

Throughout his career, Hadfield has brought laughter and entertainment to people all over the country and around the world. He said his passion for performing lies in the reaction of his audiences – he loves it when people totally let go and laugh.

"I love it when people laugh so hard tears come down their face," said Hadfield. "It makes my week." ■

VisArts Announces Plans for Arts and Innovations Center

Arts and Crafts Shop, Galleries, Conference Space Planned for Downtown Rockville

Details on plans for a portion of the five-story, mixed-use building in Rockville Town Square, now being called the Arts and Innovations Center, are becoming clearer as construction continues on the new Rockville Town Square development. The center, which will be the home of the Metropolitan Center for the Visual Arts at Rockville, a business incubator and street-level retail, will be on the corner of the Town Square plaza and Gibbs Street, adjacent to the new Rockville Library.

The Metropolitan Center for the Visual Arts at Rockville, which will be informally known as VisArts at Rockville (formerly Rockville Arts Place), is leasing from the City the second and third floors of the building. It will also lease a small portion of space on the first level to create a museum quality retail Galleria.

The retail store will feature original artwork and fine crafts from artists across the country, as well as objects and books related to the exhibits in three unique art galleries on the second floor. Those galleries will be a main gallery featuring national and international quality works, a community gallery for local and regional artists and a children's gallery for hands-on discovery. The galleries will be free and open to the public during normal business hours, evenings and weekends.

The second floor will feature artists' studios, housing between 13 and 18 artists and a visiting artist who will create on site, give presentations and teach classes.

Another highlight of the space is a 2,500-foot events room that will include an open area for lectures, meetings and a catering kitchen to support special events. The space also can accommodate small conferences with breakout rooms and the latest technology.

The third floor will include teaching studios for ceramics, glass, print making, wood turning, painting, drawing, photography and children's art. There also will be a digital lab for film and animation, a darkroom for black and white printing and administrative offices.

VisArts will host a wide variety of interactive programs, classes and exhibits to interest people of all ages and backgrounds. It is gearing the building to be a "hub" for art in Montgomery County through both its offerings and partnerships with area arts organizations.

"There is a lot of glass in this building," said Debra Moser, executive director of VisArts. "It is designed with the idea that the community can easily look in, and that the artists can easily look out into the community. We will create new connections for the people of Rockville and Montgomery County through unique hands-on art experiences and a wide-variety of learning opportunities."

Rockville's future Arts and Innovation Center will be home to the Metropolitan Center for the Visual Arts at Rockville (VisArts) and a business incubator operated by Montgomery County.

Construction began in December. The schedule calls for construction to be completed by the spring of 2007.

VisArts must raise $3.5 million for its portion of the building.
